OMORROW

We, the Seniors of 1979, dedicate this annual to our parents and all our friends who influenced our lives during the four years we attended H.C.H.S.

Fellow Classmates;

The time has finally come. We now hold in our hands our Senior annual. On its pages are glimpses back to the year 1979 — memories of our final year of High School. Never again will we walk through the halls of H.C.H.S. as students. To most of us there is a sadness knowing we may not see many of our classmates for a time, but in each one of us there is also a happiness in knowing that it is a new beginning and with each day and around every new corner there is a challenge for us to face. To each of my classmates I bid you farewell and wish you success!

Loran Wach — Valedictorian

Four years ago when we started We thought we could never wait, Till we finished our school books and were ready to graduate But now that the time has come and we're really through with it We're not one-half as anxious as we were at one time to quit. We have spent 4 years of pleasures Oh yes, there was study to be sure, But in spite of our patient toiling Glad memories will ever endure. Then besides these hours of study from which great gains were made There were picnics, plays, and parties And games of athletics well played. But, my friend, we are through with H. S. We cannot go through it again. But there are greater things to strive for And God help us that we may win!

CLASS PROPHECY OF 1979

Well, here it is, May 13th, 1999, exactly 20 years from the day we all graduated from Hayes Center High School.

I, Deb Nitsch, the owner of the Mellow Jello Factory, have decided to take a vacation that will take me to hunt up all of my old classmates.

As my journey starts out, I decided to first visit Susan Hurst at St. Agustines monastery, where she works as the cook. I heard several rumors that she tried to become a monk, but they wouldn't let her because of her sex.

While talking to her, I heard some of the monks talking about Father Boyd and his mission to Africa. Susan told me that it was Brad Felker and that he was in Africa converting the natives to Christianity.

Realizing that Africa was out of the question, I went on to find Rodney McKillip tucked away in the Rocky Mountains. Walking up the path to his cabin, I thought that he was shooting at me. Instead he had just killed a wild boar, which he invited me in for supper to eat. While eating, we did a lot of talking and then I had to be on my way.

Deciding to take a day of skiing, I headed for Breckenridge. The next morning I went to take lessons and found John Lindekugel to be the instructor. He sent his class down the mountain and we went to his condominium and talked about old days. When asked if he knew where any of his classmates were, he said that he only knew for sure about the Pattersons. They are in Alaska.

I took off for Alaska to locate them. I found them in a small igloo with 6 kids. Melanie Cox, who had married Ryan Patterson one year after graduation, was stretching a slimy whale skin over a frame, and Ryan himself was standing in the nippy air spearfishing. After Melanie sent her tribe to bed, we all talked about old times.

Melanie told me that she had read a newspaper article about Steve Brown. He was in New York with the Brownly Symphony Orchestra as the Maestro and a very rich man.

In New York I had no trouble in finding Steve. The signs everywhere said that they were playing at Carnegie Hall. I sat through the performance and was the first to congratulate him afterwards. While talking to him at his penthouse, he told me that I should get some dance lessons at a place call "Tigger's Twister's."

At the studio I found Debra Gohl to be the owner. She said she ran the studio as a hobby, because her job as secretary to the mayor of New York paid her enough in ten years to retire, but she kept on out of loyalty for the Mayor. She asked about her family and friends and sent me on my way.

I drove to Denver and found Bradley Soncksen working in the Denver Zoo. He was the manager, but specialized in handling the baboons. He showed off his three favorite ones, which he had trained himself, and then took me out for supper. We sat and talked about by-gone days for about two hours, when finally the waiter kicked us out for just loitering.

From there I went on to Hollywood to find Dennis Spickelmier. He was at a Beverly Hills swimming pool chasing girls in crocheted bikinis. He told me that he had been in Hollywood for 15 years and was still waiting for his big break.

After leaving Dennis, I went for a walk on the beach and seen a life guard on a motorcycle patroling the beach. After almost arresting me for stepping on a child's deserted sand castle, I realized who the dark, fuzzy haired guy was; Jerry Garrett. He had a dark tan and his original colored hair. We chatted for a while and then I took off.

I had found out from Jerry that several classmates were in California, so I set out to find them. In Long Beach I spied a little fisherman catching crabs off the coast. Walking down the shore to see him, I recognized him as Loran Wach. I asked him what he was doing fishing for a living. He replied that after his Presidential Campaign had not won him the Presidency, his funds forced him to live as a fisherman, He was saving every penny he got from his crabs, so he could run again.

From Long Beach, I went to San Francisco, and acting on a hunch, went to Chinatown. Sure enough, there was Mike Christner, now called Mao Chun Chink. He was the owner of a Chinese Bath and had lots of pretty girls to look after him. We went to his pagoda to talk and when it was time for the evening bath session, I left.

Mike told me to go to the dune-buggy race that next day. I went to the race and after it was over, I went over to congratulate the winner and found him to be Brent Scott. I didn't get to talk to him though, because he was on his way to the Indy 500 to race his Trans Am.

I was on my way through Oklahoma when I saw a sign saying, "Professor Bishop's Private Laboratory." After getting the guard to let me through the gate, I went to see Jeff. He was a mad little scientist and invented weed killers. In 18 years he said he had never got one to work though. All he had accomplished was the ability to distinguish the difference between a male and female weed.

After leaving Jeff, I took off for Kansas. On the highway I got a flat tire and walked to the nearest gas station. Here I found Mark Hamilton to be the owner. He told me that he owned a chain of stations across the U.S. Knowing he was busy, I left after he fixed my tire.

Going through a large town I seen a sign that said, "Dinky's Diaper World" and decided to stop in and buy Dana Lacey a gift since she was my next stop and pregnant. In the store I found Mark Vlasin as the manager and almost fainted. He had grown a foot and loomed way above me. He asked if I was buying for myself or a friend. I told him for Dana and then we talked about our classmates and their families.

I found Dana in a small Kansas town tucked in the hills. I walked to the door amus, Ittle monsters and asked one if his mommy was home. In the house he said. Inside I found her trying to change her 6th child's diaper and feed her 5th. After helping her out, she told me that she had to hire help because with 6 kids and one on the way she never found time or ways to keep up.

From there, I went to a small town in Arizona and seen some drunk get thrown out of the saloon for getting fresh with the show girls. One of the girsl I found to be Laura Miller. She said that this wasn't the life that she wanted, but was real pleased with the way things were working out.

After leaving Laura, I went to the Continental Cowboy Ranch and seen Rod Kerchal. He ran a ranch that fit its title perfectly. Rod hired cowboys from all over the world and put them to work for him. Afraid that he might put me to work, I asked about the last person on my list; Connie Rutherford.

Connie was at the Indian Reservation, so that's where I went. The chief told me that Tonto was down at the pond. At the pond I found her catching frogs and kissing them. I asked her what she was doing and she replied, "They always say, You gotta kiss a lot of frogs before you find the handsome prince," so I'm kissing and waiting on Jon.

After visiting Connie, I knew my trip had come to an end. I had found everyone and had loved every minute of finding out how they were. That class of mine is really something!!!

MEMORIES THAT WILL STAY FOREVER

The days of school are more precious than dawn,
Yet my times in the classroom are now forever gone.
How do we say good-bye to the fun we've had or to all of our friends?
The times we studied for tests, and the times both happy and sad.
No more standing in the bleachers, no more sitting in the stands.
For my years are up and I have yelled my last cheer.

This will be our last times together;
Yes, the joys we've shared are forever gone.
For my days are gone, but my memories will stay forever.
No more do I have assignments to fear or tests to take.
For the halls are empty without no picnic tables, and the lockers are bare.
The times with my friends, I will no longer share.
The days of teachers, pink passes, and boys,
Were the days when we all shared our joys and pains.

No more yelling as a team, no more pep songs from the band.

No longer will I compete as a Cardinal athlete, so proud.

No more will I wear that suit of Red & White.

No more serves to be served, no more baskets to be made,

For my last game as a Cardinal has already been played.

No more great times at Sock-hops, Pep Rallies, or at the Prom.

No more of those wild and crazy days to share together.

Yes, my days are over, they're now only yester years.

No more times of skipping classes, no more sharing in the water fights.

My friends I love, I will no longer see,

But they'll always be a part of me.

Our Senior Class, we're as close as we ever could be.

Oh God if I had one wish, I would wish that I could stay,
In those wild & crazy days when we were so happy and carefree.
Yet my wish is only a dream,
For this is my last year at HCHS.
Yet I'll always thank God that I was a part of Hayes Center High School.
Yes, my memories I'll always hold in my mind,
Because I'll always remember all of my friends,
And our last times together.

Connie Rutherford

Late this year Ike Nitsch announced his retirement as Bus Supervisor for the school district. Throughout his twenty years of dedicated service Ike has seen that the buses are properly maintained and available for school activities. Ike and his bus drivers have logged over two million miles without a serious accident or major injury.

THANKS FOR A JOB WELL DONE.
